The news from Gen. Sherman continues of the most vague and unsatisfactory character. The last steamer from Wilmington has no better intelligence than that "nothing of the movements of Gen. THE ASSASSINATION STORY.

The report that a man named Thomas Clemens had matured his plans for the assassination of the President on inauguration day had its origin in the following facts: Clemens and another person came from Alexandria on Saturday. They were both extremely disorderly, and seemed to have been druking freely. Clemens in patticular was very abusive. He said, using gross sed profane language, that he came bere to kill the President; that he was late by about one half hour, and that his Savior would never forgive him for failing to do so; that he would do it that night, namely, the 5th of March, sed that he came expressly to do it, and he would do it before he left town. Mr. Conness had no objection to referring the credentials. It appeared that the Senator from Kanasa was more persistent than was companible with progriety or regard for the off-repeated opinion of the Senator on the question involved. He (Mr. Conness) would not say how his vote would have been cast on the Louisiana question had it been brought to an issue before Congress adjourned. But it was clear to the Senate and the country that there was great imprepriety in pressing forward this application in the manner it had been for the admission of Senators from those States. During the late session the Senator had sented by his side and under his patronage a gentleman named Finhback, whose credentials were presented as Senator from Arkansas. Subsequently, on investigation, there were read here the proceedings of the so-called secession convention, held in 1860, nuder the patronage of a man named Jefferson Davis. In which the said Fishback, who was willing to come forward and take our oath that he had neither sided or connected rebellion against the United States. Mr. Howans did not think that ought to be settled in the Committee. According to his information but a comparatively small part of the people of Arkansas are loyal, and if that Government was left to itself it could not exist 48 hours, owing to the traitorous majority living within the borders of that State. It was the proper duty of the Excentive, first to certify that a State of war has ceased in Arkansas, and that it is sufficiently loyal to be taken out of what his proclamation declares to be insurrectionary States. Until then he objected to the rocupion of credentials authorizing A. B or C to participate in the deliberations and vote in this body. I will not, be said, let my enemies come here, their hands red with the blood of treason, and legiciate as to my State Government and constituents.
